

San Diego dive groups: Scuba Diver Girls

March 4, 9:18 AM • San Diego Scuba Diving Examiner • Michael Bear

Based out of San Diego, California, Scuba Diver Girls is a local group that's all about getting in the water and having a great time diving. They encourage all divers, but mainly women, to either get certified or to keep diving by creating a fun and inviting diving community. Since they know that diving is more fun in a clean, healthy ocean, they volunteer their time to help conservation groups with their projects and fundraising with groups such as the Diveheart Foundation [www.diveheart.org] which supports and facilitates programs that teach children and adults with disabilities to dive, as well as Adopt a Shark [www.adoptashark.com] and Sea Turtle restoration Project [www.seaturtles.org].

Whether you are in California, the United States, or anywhere else in the world, you should check out the Scuba Diver Girls. There are many opportunities to dive with or work side by side with a Scuba Diver Girl in conservation. Many of their girls are Instructors and some even teach all women classes in their home city. If travelling is what you want to do, Scuba Diver Girls have their own travel network equipped with knowledgeable travel agents and many pre-built trips to choose from. They can also help you customize a trip around your personal travel needs.

And no matter where you are you can log onto ScubaDiverGirls.com to find local dive shops, resorts, and other ocean related businesses and conservation groups. The directory includes discounts at diving destinations all over the world as well as great projects you can get involved in right in your own backyard.
